CHRISTOPHER D. HUDSON

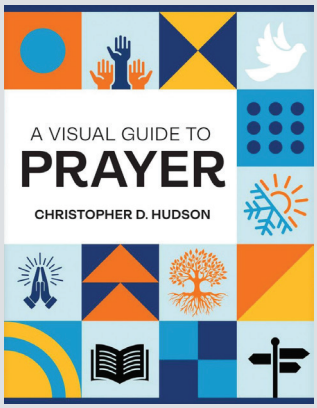
Author, A Visual Guide to Prayer
Hospital Chaplain | Bible Publisher | Bible Editor

Committed to PROMOTION Collaborative

For believers who do everything right and still feel far from God.

For most of his life, Christopher D. Hudson thought of prayer as a Christian obligation. An unusual confession from a man who has spent more than 30 years making Bibles. As president of Peachtree Publishing Services, he was managing editor on Bibles with Max Lucado, Lee Strobel, and Gary Chapman, and he wrote 100 Names of God and The Most Significant Teachings of the Bible. Yet even as a church elder and youth pastor, his prayers felt like voicemails no one would ever play back.

A mentor's question changed that: what if prayer was a chance to visit with God? He stopped performing and started spending time. Most prayer books are full of words. A Visual Guide to Prayer (Rose Publishing/Tyndale) turns prayer into infographics and models from Scripture that readers can see, personalize, and make their own. A hospital chaplain, small group leader, and Wheaton and Kairos graduate, Christopher helps believers stop talking at God and start being with him.



SUGGESTED INTRODUCTION

Have you ever prayed and wondered whether God was even checking his messages? Christopher D. Hudson has, even as a church elder, youth pastor, and Bible publisher. Then one change made prayer the best part of his day. Christopher is a hospital chaplain and author of A Visual Guide to Prayer, a book that turns prayer into pictures and models you can actually see and make your own. Today he's showing us how to stop talking at God and start being with him. Chris, welcome!
